

About Us

The Centre for Health Economics & Medicines Evaluation (CHEME) was founded in 2001, and is now one of the leading health economics centres in the UK

Researchers at CHEME produce world leading research across a range of health economic and medicines evaluation activities. These include pharmaceutical economics and policy, health technology assessment, trial-based economic evaluations and medicines use research

At the last Research Excellence Framework, research outputs were rated 3rd out of 94 institutions across the UK

CHEME core strengths are in our multidisciplinary approach to health research and close alliance with the NHS

CHEME is part of the Bangor Institute of Health and Medical Research (BIMHR) in the School of Healthcare Sciences.

Pharmacoeconomics
SHORT COURSE

Background

The allocation of finite and scarce resources to fund medicines by the NHS requires decisions to be made that are supported by robust evidence.

This course offers a comprehensive overview of pharmaceconomic evaluation and health technology assessment methods for those working within the NHS or with an interest about how these decisions are made.

We will cover

- Medicines and the NHS
- Introduction to Health Technology Assessment
- Patient Outcomes
- Evidence synthesis
- Trial-based economic evaluation
- Resource use and costs
- Health economic modelling
- Critical appraisal

Who should attend?

Pharmacists, clinicians, allied health professionals, postgraduate students and others with an interest in pharmacoeconomics. No prior knowledge of economics is required.

Learning outcomes

- To understand the basic principles of pharmacoeconomics
- To interpret the results of health technology assessments
- Gain insight into the perspectives of decision makers
- To be equipped with critical appraisal skills for economic evaluations and evidence syntheses
